

MANAGING APPLICATION INTERACTIONS USING DISTRIBUTED MODALITY COMPONENTS

ABSTRACT

A method for managing multimodal interactions can include the step of registering a multitude of modality components with a modality component server, wherein each modality component handles an interface modality for an application. The modality component can be connected to a device. A user interaction can be conveyed from the device to the modality component for processing. Results from the user interaction can be placed on a shared memory are of the modality component server.